

THE PROBLEM: Political attacks on your First Amendment rights

- Citizens cannot improve government policies.
- Voter information is controlled by political insiders.
- Legislators call thousands of bills “emergencies” to stop petitions.
- Complex 1563-word procedures from 1910 are run by lawyers.

*Politicians hate petitions. They don't want us to clean up politics.
We share political power, but they want us to shut up and do what we are told. They seek to stop us from petitioning for a vote.*

THE SOLUTION: The Petition Rights Amendment (PRA)

- Permit local petitions. Ballot titles up to 60 words must be in plain English.
- Provide facts filed by citizens for voter guides. Hold one election yearly.
- Limit state to 12 “emergencies” yearly. Fewer lawsuits, faster reviews.
- 376 simple words in law will let average citizens request a vote.

Proposed ballot title in 2026:

Shall Colorado allow petitions to all local governments; revise procedures to review petitions quicker; inform voters of petition contents; limit ballot titles to 60 words; cap new laws exempt from possible voter review; hold petition elections yearly; change most petitions only by another petition; and repeal certain petition laws?
